Claire Langley is Director of Policy and Research at Climate Advisers, focusing on the post-2020 sustainable development agenda, and international climate & energy diplomacy.

Before joining Climate Advisers, Claire served as a Research Associate in the Global Economy and Development program at the Brookings Institution, where her research focused on climate change and energy policy, green growth and innovation, climate finance and climate economics.

Claire's experience includes extensive research and analysis on international climate policy and multilateral processes at London-based climate and energy think tank E3G: Third Generation Environmentalism. Her diverse portfolio there included projects to build political support for climate action, create low carbon development plans in emerging economies, explore innovative market-based climate solutions, and build civil society coalitions for stronger policies.

Claire holds an MSc in Environment and Development from the University of Edinburgh and a BA with honors from Acadia University.
