Peter Graham is currently an independent consultant and Senior Fellow with Climate Advisers. Before starting his own independent consulting business, Peter led WWF's Global Forest and Climate Programme.

At WWF, his team managed efforts on forest conservation and climate change, with a particular focus on reducing emissions from deforestation and forest degradation, and enhancing forest carbon stocks around the globe.

Over the course of Peter's 13-year career with the Canadian Forest Service, his work covered a range of domestic and international climate policy issues. On the domestic side, this has included the development of Canadian national greenhouse gas offset systems, including forest project protocols, forest sector mitigation analyses, monitoring, accounting and reporting systems, and intergovernmental consultations. On the international side, Peter served as a co-chair of negotiations under the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change and lead negotiator and policy advisor on reducing emissions from deforestation and forest degradation, and forest carbon management for the Canadian government.

Peter's prior professional experience includes six years of forestry project management in coastal and northern British Columbia. His forestry career began with Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources Junior Ranger program.

Peter earned a bachelor's degree in forestry from the University of New Brunswick and a master's degree in forestry from the University of British Columbia.
